

Plenty of life left in our Operatic Society

JUST wanted to follow up on your item on the July 28 reporting on Bristol Amateur Operatic Society (BAOS) and their struggle to keep afloat.

Well we went to the Newman Hall at the start of September and in our opinion they ain't going nowhere yet.

The show was quite amazing, we thought we were just going to the usual review show with everyone doing a little slot. How wrong we were! The dance routines were stunning and the standard of singing was superb. We sat enthralled for a very fast moving two and a half hours of pure entertainment.

Good luck to Bristol Amateur Operatic Society and long may you reign.

Kay Duce,
Keynsham.
